CHRISTIE ENDORSEMENT

1 Chris Christie has won the endorsement of the New Hampshire Union Leader, a major conservative publication in an important early voting state. Union Leader publisher Joseph McQuaid said on Sunday he believed Christie was the candidate who could "take the fight to" Donald Trump and Hillary Clinton as well as confront the threat posed by Islamic State. REUTERS

PILOT'S BODY RECOVERED

2 Turkey recovered the body of a Russian pilot from northern Syria and presented it to Russian diplomats on Sunday, five days after shooting down his warplane in an incident that wrecked relations between two of the main powers involved in Syria's war. A coffin carrying Oleg Peshkov arrived by ambulance on the tarmac of Hatay Airport in southern Turkey near the Syrian border, a Reuters photographer said. REUTERS

CROOK DIES IN CHIMNEY

3 A suspected burglar who attempted to enter a California home through the chimney died after the homeowner lit a fire without realizing anyone was inside, police said. The man appeared to have climbed into the chimney during the night while the owner was away and then became stuck, according to Fresno County Sheriff's Office. REUTERS

BALTIMORE TRIAL STARTS

4 Trial begins on Monday for a Baltimore police officer charged in the death of a black man from an injury he suffered while in police custody that triggered rioting and protests and fueled a U.S. debate on police brutality. Officer William Porter, 26, is the first of six officers scheduled for separate trials for the death in April of Freddie Gray. REUTERS

POLICE SEIZE LOADED GUN

5 A call for a noisy party on Norton Street in Dorchester led police to seize a loaded handgun early Sunday morning. David Avelino, 27, of Boston, faces weapons charges after police found a loaded handgun near him on the ground. Avelino had been acting as if he had been trying to hide something when police approached a group of men outside the home. Officers also arrested Joshua Teixeira, 20, of Boston, after Teixeira allegedly refused to comply when police drew their weapons and ordered partygoers to the ground. METRO

MAN DEAD IN BURNT CAR

6 A man found dead in a burning car in Mattapan this weekend has not been identified and a cause of death for the victim has not been made public. The man's body was found in a River Street parking lot around 11 a.m., a police spokesman said, adding investigators do not suspect foul play. METRO

Walsh endorses Clinton

Hillary Clinton also announced an infrastructure spending plan.

Hillary Clinton's campaign for president got the formal nod from Boston Mayor Marty Walsh on Sunday.

Walsh endorsed the Democratic candidate at her stop in Faneuil Hall, where Clinton also announced a $275 billion infrastructure spending plan to a labor union crowd.

"Nobody comes closer to her experience. Nobody comes closer to her achievements, and just as important she has heart and she has got grit," Walsh said according to media reports. "Get your sledgehammers ready, because we have a glass ceiling to demolish."

infrastructure by $275 billion over the next five years will be fully paid for by changing how businesses are taxed, a campaign aide told Reuters, without providing any details.

Of the total amount, $25 billion will be earmarked for an infrastructure bank. Clinton's campaign estimates her proposals could also encourage private investment that, along with government spending, would inject a total of $500 billion into rebuilding crumbling roads, bridges, buildings and other structures.

"My jobs plan starts with investing in infrastructure," Clinton said on Sunday at the launch of "Hard Hats for Hillary" in Boston, "not just because infrastructure jobs are good-paying jobs, though they are, and not just because we desperately need to invest in building our future again, which we do, but because investing in infrastructure makes our economy more productive and competitive across the board."

The hard hats group is made up of union workers in skilled trades such as carpentry who support Clinton's campaign.

T-sketching project hits shelves, stage

Laura Meilman made marker-drawn versions of all 121 MBTA stops for her "Project T-Scapes."

SPENCER BUELL
@MetroBOS
spencerbuell@metro.us

Cobbled together over more than a century, dressed up with art and traveled by nearly everyone from nearly everywhere, it's a unique and dynamic beast, this train system of ours.

Those willing to look up a minute from their smartphones at their platform of choice might notice there's a lot to see at the T's point A's and point B's: an eye-catching puddle reflection or canoodling couple here, a shadow-cast sidewalk there.

Such is the vision of Laura Meilman, a local artist who in 2013 set out to share her eye for art in ordinary places by traveling to each of the T's 121 subway stops and capturing their feel, one colorful swipe at a time.

"I wanted an art project that would sort of have a clear goal and that would get me out and exploring Boston," said Meilman, 27. "I decided to just pick up some markers and go for it."

Cambridge artist Laura Meilman created her series Project T-scapes by drawing an image of every MBTA T station. NICOLAUS CZARNECKI

"I wanted an art project that would sort of have a clear goal and that would get me out and exploring Boston."

Meilman

A collection of her popular sketches, which she calls "Project T-Scapes," is now compiled on a website. They are available to buy in calendar form and on postcards, and next month they'll be featured as the inspiration for a performance art show in East Boston.

Pictured in each are tiny scenes, scribbled on benches, inside trains and from vantage points far away. In one, she captured a T worker pushing a broom across the floor at Assembly station. In her entry for Oak Grove, an Orange Line car idles in the dark.

She said she picked which spots to focus on not by following a plan but just by looking around. Maybe the lighting was just so, or the exactly right subject happened to be at the stop the same time she was.

"It's pretty intuitive," Meilman said. "Sometimes it would jump right out at me. ... Other days I'd find nothing at all."

She met some curious observers along the way, and had some quick chats with commuters — abbreviated as all T platform conversations are by the coming and going of trains.

One of them, a man named Ken Gagne she met for a few minutes while sketching near South Station, went on to post about it on Craigslist's "missed connections" section. They're now friends.

It was a chance encounter among hundreds of commuters, and the story of their meeting left such an impression on Gagne that he hopes to one day share it on "The Moth," the spoken-word production.

"She could have kept them to herself," Gagne said of the sketches. "But she has a willingness to take those chances and hope for the best."

Soon, the sketches will be taking center stage in a music, theater and poetry production called Pla(T)forms, for which about 50 writers in Boston and beyond were invited to use the works as inspiration. Readings are scheduled for Dec. 10 and 12 at the Atlantic Works Gallery.

"It's been a nice mix of distinct voices," said Jamie Carillo, the co-artistic director at the Fort Point Theatre Channel who is curating and acting out the show's contributions. "Much like the T itself."

Meilman said it's possible she'll turn her attention next to MBTA bus stops, or take on the challenge of hitting every stop on the commuter rail. Her dream, though, would be to take the project nationwide, Amtrak station to Amtrak station.

She said she doesn't plan to update the collection when things change — when the renovation at Government Center station wraps up, or if the proposed extension of the Green Line ever happens.

"The way I'm feeling about it is I captured this one moment in MBTA history," she said. "But you never know."

Help Metro make magic

Please donate to the Metro Magic annual holiday toy drive during the 2015 holiday season.

In keeping with the holiday spirit of giving, Metro is once again launching Tony's Metro Magic, our annual toy drive for underprivileged children in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

This year marks the seventh anniversary of the toy drive, which was renamed in memory of the man who oversaw the project for more than four years, Tony Metcalf, Metro's longest-running editor-in-chief. Mr. Metcalf passed away in 2013 from colon cancer at the age of 50.

Mr. Metcalf lit up every year as he saw the faces of children unwrap their holiday gifts. It is our goal to keep that magic alive. We are now asking readers to contribute what they can to Tony's Metro Magic.

Metro has created a wish list at the Target website that readers can access by going to www.metro.us and clicking on the Tony's Metro Magic logo.

From there, just choose the toys you wish to donate, pay online using Target's secure payment system, and your gifts, along with your name attached, will be delivered to Metro's offices in each city.

This season, we hope you will remember the children who will spend the holidays in shelters or who may not have gifts to open. Even one small gift can make a big difference in a child's holiday season.

Store sales down slightly for Thanksgiving and Black Friday

Sales at U.S. brick-and-mortar stores on Thanksgiving Day and Black Friday were down slightly from last year, but the performance was still seen as strong in a holiday shopping season where discounts spread well beyond the weekend and many shoppers moved to the Web.

Online sales were up by double digits, according to data released on Saturday.

Data from analytics firm RetailNext showed overall sales for both days fell 1.5 percent on flat customer traffic, while average spending per shopper dropped 1.4 percent.

Preliminary data from ShopperTrak showed sales at stores totaled about $12.1 billion on Thursday and Friday. The company said it is an "estimated decrease from last year" but did not give the percentage decline due to an internal change in the way it calculates data. Last year, it reported sales of $12.29 billion for the same period.

numbers on Tuesday. It stuck by its forecast of a 2.4 percent increase for November and December sales.

The data highlights the waning importance of Black Friday, which until a few years ago kicked off the holiday shopping season, as more retailers start discounting earlier in the month and open their doors on Thanksgiving Day.

Both firms said that despite the fall in sales over the two days, the performance must be interpreted as a good one for retail stores because sales held up amid rising competition from online shopping and were better than expected due to pent-up consumer demand and lower gas prices. REUTERS

'I was 100 percent right' on 9/11 Muslim remarks

The controversy could be starting to hurt Trump, who has dropped 12 percentage points in the polls in the past five days. He fell from 43 percent to 31 percent.

U.S. Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump insisted on Sunday he was "100 percent right" when he said he saw thousands of Muslims in Jersey City, New Jersey, cheering the 9/11 attacks on the World Trade Center, even though fact-checkers have debunked his assertion.

In a phone interview on NBC's "Meet the Press," Trump said he has heard from "hundreds of people who agree" that there were televised Muslim celebrations of the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks, which he used as evidence to show his remarks were true.

"I saw it. So many people saw it," said Trump, who, in the race for the November 2016 election, has been among the most vocal of the Republican candidates in expressing skepticism about Muslims in the United States. "So, why would I take it back? I'm not going to take it back."

When NBC anchor Chuck Todd suggested the people Trump heard from are supporters and might want to agree with him, Trump interrupted to note the "huge Muslim population" New Jersey has.

"Why wouldn't it have taken place?" he said of a celebration there. "I've had hundreds of people call in and tweet in on Twitter, saying that they saw it and I was 100 percent right."

Donald Trump GETTY IMAGES

Trump came under fire last week after saying at a rally and on television that he had seen thousands of people in Jersey City cheer the collapse of the twin towers in Manhattan.

His remarks have since been disputed by public officials and fellow Republican candidate New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie, who said: "I think if it had happened, I would remember it."

When his remarks were revisited on NBC, Trump said: "All over the world — forget about New Jersey for a second — all over the world, it was reported that Muslims were celebrating the fall of the World Trade Center."

But he quickly rejected Todd's assertion that "this didn't happen in New Jersey."

"It did happen in New Jersey," Trump said.

"I have a very good memory, I'll tell you," he said. "I saw it somewhere on television many years ago. And I never forgot it."

Ben Carson, after visit to refugee camp, says Syrians want to go home

Republican presidential candidate Ben Carson, after a visit to a Syrian refugee camp in Jordan this weekend, said on Sunday that the refugees do not want to come to the United States and would prefer to return to Syria.

But Carson, one of the leaders in the polls in the contest for the Republican presidential nomination in 2016, offered few details on how he would work to defeat Islamic State militants and stabilize Syria to enable the refugees' return.

"We're hearing that they all want to come here to the United States, and that's not what they want. They want to go back home," Carson said on the ABC news program "This Week."

In a round of television interviews from Jordan, Carson also defended comments he made earlier this month in which he compared Americans' attitude toward Syrian refugees to their fear of a rabid dog in their neighborhood.

"The Syrians and the people here completely understood what I was saying," Carson told NBC's "Meet the Press." "It's only the news media in our country that thinks that you're calling Syrians dogs. They understand here that we're talking about the jihadists, the Islamic terrorists."

Carson, a retired neurosurgeon who has faced scrutiny over his foreign policy credentials, visited the Zaatari camp for refugees fleeing Syria's civil war, and said he also spoke with medical personnel, humanitarian workers and government officials.

In the ABC interview, Carson called for increased U.S. aid for regional refugee efforts such as those in Jordan.

He said he believes that greater contributions to such facilities in the region could eliminate security risks associated with granting U.S. asylum to Syrian refugees.

Carson said that Islamic State should be defeated quickly and criticized the current U.S. strategy as "piecemeal."

Planned Parenthood says Colorado shooter opposed abortion

In addition to the three fatalities, nine people were injured, including five police officers.

Planned Parenthood said on Sunday that news reports that the gunman who attacked its Colorado health clinic had uttered "no more baby parts" during his arrest showed that the suspect was motivated by an anti-abortion agenda.

The remark attributed to the suspect, identified by police as Robert Lewis Dear, was an apparent reference to Planned Parenthood's abortion activities and its role in delivering fetal tissue to medical researchers, a hot button issue in the 2016 race for the presidency.

"We now know the man responsible for the tragic shooting at PP's health center in Colorado was motivated by opposition to safe and legal abortion," the organization said on Twitter.

Conservatives have accused Planned Parenthood, a nonprofit that provides a range of health services, including abortion, of illegally selling baby parts, an accusation it has strenuously denied.

Dear, a 57-year-old South Carolina native who moved to Colorado, made the remarks during his arrest after a standoff lasting several hours at the Colorado Springs clinic on Friday, NBC News and other media outlets reported.

Reuters was unable to independently confirm those reports of Dear's comments though the reports cited unnamed law enforcement sources.

While Dear's remarks could hint at a possible motive for Friday's rampage, NBC's sources stressed that investigators were still not sure why the gunman launched the attack.

Authorities have steadfastly declined to discuss a motive for the attack, saying their investigation was still under way.

But Colorado Springs police on Sunday sent a tweet that said unofficial leaks could jeopardize the investigation and prosecution, without specifically mentioning the words attributed to Dear.

Dear, who appeared to have moved to a remote community in Colorado last year, has been jailed ahead of a court appearance scheduled for Monday.

The shooting was believed to be the first deadly attack at an abortion provider in the United States in six years. The Colorado Springs center has been repeatedly targeted for protests by anti-abortion activists. REUTERS

Three people dead, 12 injured in New Jersey crash with cow hauler

Three people died and a dozen were injured after a van crashed into a cattle trailer parked on the shoulder of a New Jersey highway, leaving the interstate strewn with dead cows, state police said on Sunday.

A man standing on the shoulder after his car struck the cattle trailer earlier and two van passengers died in the incident late Saturday on Interstate 287, New Jersey State Police said.

No charges had been filed in the incident as of Sunday morning, state police said.

Police said Troy Chase, 43, of Pittston, Maine, had stopped his truck on the right shoulder of the northbound lanes to repair a cattle trailer he was towing, when it was struck by a car driven by Ravi Naik, 23, of Hillsborough, New Jersey.

Naik exited the car and was standing on the shoulder when a passenger van carrying a dozen passengers struck the right guardrail, the trailer, the truck and Naik, before crossing the lanes and hitting the left guardrail, police said.

Naik was pronounced dead at a local hospital and two van passengers were pronounced dead at the scene, police said. The dozen injured included Chase and the van's driver, Xu Feng Ma, police said. None of the injuries were life-threatening. REUTERS

Anne Hathaway's in a family way

Look, guys! Something else came true! Oscar winner Anne Hathaway stepped out over the weekend with a very noticeable midsection bulge, alerting the world to the fact that she and husband Adam Shulman are expecting their first child. "Anne is in her second trimester and feeling great," a source tells E! News. Though there's been no official announcement, speculation started in September when she was doing press for "The Intern" and starting to show a bit. Hathaway and Shulman were married in 2012, and Hathaway has not been shy in interviews about their intentions to start a family.

Tracy Morgan says he talked to God

Tracy Morgan is opening up about the horrific car accident in June 2014 that left him in a coma and took the life of his friend James McNair, and some of it may surprise you. Morgan tells Complex magazine that he "went to the other side" and talked to God. "This is not something I'm making up," he insists. "Do you know what God said to me? He said, 'Your room ain't ready. I still got something for you to do.' And here I am, doing an interview with you."

He also gets candid about just how much his life has changed since his recovery. "You're never going to be normal after you go through something like that. You don't die for a few weeks and then come back to normal, trust me," he says. "Something's going to be missing, something's going to be gained — you just got to live your life after that. But after surviving something like that, I'm probably never going to feel normal." That's heavy, man.

Ice T's newborn has more Twitter followers than you

While you were spending the weekend binge-watching "The Great British Bake-Off," Ice T and Coco were welcoming their first daughter to the world — and to the world of social media. Baby girl Chanel Nicole was born on Saturday morning, and within hours she had her first post on her own Twitter account up. And by the end of the weekend she had more than 14,000 followers. Still no word on a blue check mark from Twitter, though. Maybe that's more of a christening present.

Why we still need 'Trumbo'

Director Jay Roach thinks not much has changed since the Hollywood blacklist days.

NED EHRBAR
@Nedrick
ned.ehrbar@metro.us

Director Jay Roach goes inside a dark patch of Hollywood history with "Trumbo," chronicling the persecution of Dalton Trumbo (Bryan Cranston) and the rest of the Hollywood Ten that kicked off the blacklist amid anti-Communist hysteria stoked by the House Un-American Activities Committee. We've come a long way from that kind of fear-mongering and reactionary politics, right?

Not quite. In making the film, Roach has been forced to examine how much hasn't changed.

"Isn't it kind of like things that go on now?" Roach ponders. "Certainly there are valid, real concerns. Real threats exist. No question that totalitarian communism was a true threat back then and terrorism now is a true threat. But once there is a threat, there's almost no chance it won't be exploited to raise a kind of hysteria that leads to smearing people with labeling and tying them to that threat."

Even when specifically discussing anti-communist sentiments, Roach finds strains of McCarthyism still alive and well more than half a century later. "I hope [the events of the film] will stand for the tendency, for example, to label anything that's pro-worker as being communist," he says.

"If you're interested in giving workers more safety on the job, health benefits and not working 80-hour or 100-hour weeks, you must be a communist."

You can definitely see fear-mongering in other avenues, Roach says, especially in the presidential race. "Other [fears] are selling now. 'Immigrants are destroying America,' says Donald Trump. Those memes are old hat, they're old chestnuts now and I'm always amazed and surprised by it," he says. "Even looking back, I'm astonished in myself that I went, 'How could that have possibly happened in America, that these writers could be thrown under that bus?' And I go, 'Oh, right, there's another bus to throw people under right now.'"

Daniel Radcliffe and James McAvoy blind with science

The two actors got to play with tradition in the oddball origin story "Victor Frankenstein."

LUBA EGOROVA
letters@metro.us

In "Victor Frankenstein," James McAvoy and Daniel Radcliffe join a long tradition of actors playing Mary Shelley's mad scientist and his assistant. But they are the first to play with this dynamic: Instead of Frankenstein's hunchbacked helper, Igor is a London dandy, plus a medical genius in his own way. It also allowed the two actors to goof around on the set of a particularly nutty take on

James McAvoy's Victor Frankenstein works closely with Daniel Radcliffe's Igor, who doesn't have a massive hump on his back in this version. ALEX BAILEY

The big questions

Creating life is like playing God. Do you believe in God? Have you ever wanted to challenge God?

McAvoy: Even people with great faith and those who have a close relationship to God challenge him, like his son. We all challenge things we believe. Victor is challenging God. "I can do it better" — that's what he's saying. There is an idea of God-creator and the idea of faith. We are moving towards it every day, trying to become people. It's an everyday life. And that is what the Frankenstein story is about.

This is your first time working together, but you seem to have a mutual admiration.

James McAvoy: When I have to work with people I don't like, I think they are really horrible. I generally never argue with them, either. We got on really well. There was no arguing.

Daniel Radcliffe: Yeah. I think that the image people have of actors being constantly at war with each other isn't generally the case.

What is your relationship with science?

McAvoy: I didn't take physics. But I did take chemistry and biology for a very short time. And in chemistry, I think I got a C, and in biology a B. And then when I grew old enough to choose subjects I would specialize in, I dropped them both and took English and music. I always enjoyed science at school, and I enjoy hearing scientists talk about science. But I'm definitely glad I don't have to learn it or do it.

At the beginning of the film, Daniel's character doesn't have a name. Have you ever wanted to be anonymous?

Radcliffe: As actors we put a mask on and become nobody and anonymous in that way. In real life, you often don't want to be well known nor famous, and sometimes I remember I don't want to be an actor anymore.

McAvoy: The nice thing about being an actor is that on every single job, it's like a clean slate — a new director, new crew, maybe even a new country, new language, all that kind of stuff. But what is great about acting is that you are not pretending to be someone else but trying to be your better self.

How to score deals on the most in-demand toys

The Toy Insider's Laurie Schacht tells us what kids want under the Christmas tree this year. Plus, where to get the biggest savings.

EMILY LAURENCE
@EmLaurence
emily.laurence@metro.us

In 1996, fights broke out over Tickle Me Elmo. In 2000, no store could keep the Razor scooter in stock. This year, there are a few different big-ticket items that millions of kids are all putting on their list for Santa. Here are the top three.

Girl Scouts
Cookie Oven
$44.99

Girl Scouts Cookie Oven

"Cooking is a huge trend this year," Schacht says. In addition to a Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle Pizza Oven coming out early next month, the Girl Scouts Cookie Oven is already on many little bakers' Christmas lists. "It's a real working oven, and all of the recipes are for Girl Scouts-inspired cookies. And each oven comes with Thin Mints," says Schacht.

Where to score a Cyber Monday deal: GirlScoutShop.com is selling this toy for $39.99 until the end of Cyber Monday only. No coupon code required.

'Star Wars' Bladebuilders Jedi Master Lightsaber

"This year, one of the biggest demands you're going to see is all about 'Star Wars,'" says renowned toy expert Laurie Schacht, also known as The Toy Insider. "We're seeing the Force strong!"

Schacht says the toy industry is expected to see a whopping 7 percent growth this holiday season (usually there is only a 1 percent to 2 percent flux), largely thanks to "Star Wars."

There's a wide range of toys for "Star Wars VII: The Force Awakens," but Schacht says one of the hottest is Bladebuilders Jedi Master Lightsaber, which comes with a big lightsaber, two smaller ones and accessories so kids can build and customize their own lightsaber.

How to avoid Cyber Monday scams

We're officially in the hectic holiday shopping season. Here's how to avoid traps when buying online.

DMITRY BELYAEV
Metro World News
letters@metro.us

Millions of shoppers will hit retailers' websites today, looking for serious discounts and promotions.

But be aware: Online stores never close, and because you can casually browse from the comfort of your couch, cyber shopping hysteria can lead you to make impulse buys.

"It causes many people to shop more often and make unnecessary purchases or splurges," says Andrea Woroch, a consumer and money-saving expert. "Especially since many keep payment information saved, buying something with a single tap leads to huge overspending."

Online buying can also become tricky when it comes to clothes and shoes, because you can't try them on. Colors may appear different on your computer or tablet screen than they actually are, and you can't feel the quality of the material. This is why experts advise to only buy brands you're familiar with.

"Don't browse for fun," Woroch says. "Give yourself time to think through the purchase. The necessity to shop may pass, and you will forget about those items. Placing goods in your virtual cart is not the best way to fulfill that urge to buy and spend."

Compare prices

Shop around before you buy anything. Compare prices using

Shop smartly and safely this holiday season. ISTOCK sites like PriceGrabber. Or sign up for a site like InvisibleHand, which alerts shoppers if something they're browsing is sold at another site for less.

Track discounts

There are many outlets where you can buy what you need, but always make sure to pick the best price. TrackIf monitors sites, pages and searches and alerts you when something becomes available, when the cost of an item drops or there is a special offer.

Use coupons

Sites like CouponSherpa offer codes for discounts on your orders as well as free shipping deals. Reading Sherpa's blog may also be helpful for learning tips and tricks on saving money every day, not just during the holidays.

Investigate other opinions

Read reports for different products at Epinions or Buzzillions. Both websites provide consumer-generated reviews and ratings of items you want to buy. Patiently research the pros and cons, and only then make a decision.

Avoid sketchy sites

The Internet is rife with scam sites, so it's crucial to ensure you're doing business with legitimate retailers.

Check out Get-LinkInfo.com to verify a site you're less familiar with. It will show, for example, the amount of unsafe links it contains and if it is malware-free.

HOW TO GET AHEAD

Want a great work-life balance, awesome pay and a rewarding career? Here's why data scientists have the "sexiest" jobs ever.

RAQUEL LANERI
@RaquelLaneri
raquel.laneri@metro.us

Is data scientist the sexiest job of the 21st century? That's what the Harvard Business Review said back in 2012, and now the rest of the world seems to be catching up. Forbes has recently ranked data science the No. 1 career for work-life balance, while CareerCast has named it the sixth-best job for 2015.

That's partly because of high salaries (average $115,000, according to Glassdoor), but there's also a growing demand for the job. Companies want workers who can look at the facts, figures and information their products or services generate to glean all sorts of insights that could boost efficiency, safety, customer satisfaction or profits, among other things.

"The applications are really broad," says Shanji Xiong, chief scientist for Experian's Global DataLabs, which uses data innovation to solve strategic marketing and risk-management problems in financial services, telecommunications and Want to become a data scientist? Here's how

1. Take a free online course to see if it's something that you actually want to do. Shanji recommends a course in statistics or motion learning, which you can find at sites like Coursera.
2. If you decide that data science is something you want to pursue, go ahead and learn one programming language that's widely used in the field. That will allow you to advance to the next step, which is:

3. Get your hands dirty by trying out a data-mining project. (Kaggle has a ton of tests you can play with.)
4. Befriend some practicing data scientists so you can get their feedback and perspective, and to see the sorts of projects they're working on. LinkedIn, or another social media group, devoted to the subject is a good place to start.

health care. "Almost every aspect of our lives today has data and a data scientist behind it. Whether you're driving your car, you're cooking your meal, you use your cell phone — every step along the way there's a lot of data science behind the scenes making it possible."

We asked Shanji why he loves his job.

You can study anything and be a data scientist.

There's no such thing as a data science degree — yet, anyway. And while most data scientists do come from fields like computer science, engineering or mathematics, Shanji says, they don't need to. "I run into data scientists who come from more liberal arts backgrounds: economics, finance, other sciences," he says. "To me, data science is a whole spectrum of capabilities and profiles, because it's constantly developing, you're constantly learning, and it can be applied to anything — likely something you have some familiarity with." All you need, he adds, is a little coding experience and a desire to learn.

It's creative

If you think data science means just staring at a computer all day crunching numbers, you're wrong. A data scientist is like a designer, with an equal dose of mathematical application and intuition. "The thing about being a data scientist is that you have the data, but that data doesn't talk to you directly," Shanji says. "It's up to you, the data scientist, to try to understand what kind of information is in the data and then designing the tools to detect larger patterns" or more nuanced, niche information. "There are lots of companies — Google, Facebook, Microsoft — that look for and encourage out-of-the-box thinking."

It's rewarding

Another thing you might not assume about data science: It's really fun. Shanji describes a work environment that's built on collaboration, bouncing ideas off one another and working with people of all different backgrounds and skills. Plus, it can be rewarding. "We're not concentrating on immediate revenue, but on longer-term, high-impact projects," he says. He cites work that his company does with health services to determine things like how to reduce a hospital readmittance rate or how to get patients to take meds. "Data science can do so much, but at its best it can be an advantage to our society."

B's hit stride entering December

The Bruins have rebounded nicely from a sluggish start to November.

RICH SLATE
@RichSlate
sports@metro.us

At the beginning of November, the Bruins (13-8-1) were a mess as they lost their first three games on the month. Since then, they've gone 7-2 including wins in their last five games. Suddenly, Boston is one of the hottest teams in the league and it has climbed into the Eastern Conference playoff picture (currently seventh place) a little over a quarter through the 2015-16 regular season.

Most NHL observers use Thanksgiving as the first real marker of the schedule, meaning that if you are in the top-eight at that point, you should have a good chance to make the playoffs. After all, it's always tougher to make up ground after New Year's.

For many reasons, last Friday's 4-3 comeback victory over the Rangers (16-6-2) at TD Garden was the most impressive win thus far for the B's. New

Colin Miller, left, and Tuukka Rask helped shut down the Rangers last week. GETTY IMAGES

York is not only one of the top teams in the East, but also the entire NHL. Plus, Boston rallied from two different deficits (2-1 and 3-2) and scored twice in the final four minutes on New York goaltender Henrik Lundqvist — who is still one of the best in the world.

Bruins head coach Claude Julien is starting to see his team's identity being formed and he likes it.

"We are a hard-working team with a good mixture of veterans and new faces," noted Julien. "I liked our game, it makes it fun for a coach. We are headed in the right direction."

Boston's home record is still under .500 (5-6-

1) but it remains one of the top road clubs in the NHL (8-2-0). After a busy stretch with four games last week, the B's can ease into December as their next game isn't until Wednesday (9:30 p.m.,

NESN) at Edmonton (8-14-2). The Bruins have three games in four nights in Western Canada but it shouldn't be as daunting as it sounds since they are at Calgary (8-14-2) on Friday (9, NESN) and Vancouver (9-8-7) on Saturday (10, NESN). Currently, none of those teams are in the Western Conference playoff picture.

"It'll be good to rest a little bit," admitted winger Brett Connolly, who scored one of Boston's two power play goals against New York. "We scored some big goals and made the right plays at the right time. ... We need to build on this because it's a big road trip coming up."

The Bruins have 14 games in December, eight at the Garden and six on the road. And don't forget that the Winter Classic is getting closer — New Year's Day (1, NBC) at Gillette Stadium vs. Montreal (18-4-3).

More Okafor issues

Philadelphia 76ers rookie Jahlil Okafor, right, reportedly knocked out a heckler outside the Storyville Nightclub in Boston early Thursday morning. The heckler reportedly yelled out that the "76ers suck and would never win a game." After the Thanksgiving morning incident, The Philadelphia Inquirer reported that Okafor had been involved in two other incidents in the past two months. Three weeks ago, the former Duke star was stopped on the Ben Franklin Bridge for "reckless driving," going 108 mph. Outside a Philly club in October, Okafor reportedly had a gun pointed at his head. LEGAL NOTICES

CITATION ON PETITION FOR FORMAL ADJUDICATION

Docket No. SU15P2805EA

Commonwealth of Massachusetts

The Trial Court

Probate and Family Court

Estate of: Velia Norma Tosi

Also known as: Velia N Tosi

Date of Death: 10/08/2015

Suffolk Probate and Family Court

24 New Chardon Street, Boston, MA 02114 • (617) 788-8300

To all interested persons:

A Petition for Formal Probate of Will with Appointment of Personal Representative, has been filed by Linda Tosi of Boston MA requesting that the Court enter a formal Decree and Order and for such other relief as requested in the Petition.

The Petitioner requests that: Linda Tosi of Boston MA be appointed as Personal Representative(s) of said estate to serve Without Surety on the bond in an unsupervised administration.

Important Notice

You have the right to obtain a copy of the Petition from the Petitioner or at the Court. You have a right to object to this proceeding. To do so, you or your attorney must file a written appearance and objection at this Court before 10:00 a.m. on the return day of 12/17/2015.

This is NOT a hearing date, but a deadline by which you must file a written appearance and objection if you object to this proceeding. If you fail to file a timely written appearance and objection followed by an affidavit of objections within thirty (30) days of the return date, action may be taken without further notice to you.

UNSUPERVISED ADMINISTRATION UNDER THE MASSACHUSETTS
UNIFORM PROBATE CODE (MUPC)

A Personal Representative appointed under the MUPC in an unsupervised administration is not required to file an inventory or annual accounts with the Court. Persons interested in the estate are entitled to notice regarding the administration directly from the Personal Representative and may petition the Court in any matter relating to the estate, including the distribution of assets and expenses of administration.

WITNESS, Hon. Joan P. Armstrong, First Justice of this Court.

Date: November 16, 2015

Aries You will attract attention if you take an enthusiastic approach. Offer help to those in need in order to build a strong support system.

Taurus Someone will try to meddle in your personal affairs. Don't share your problems with peers or anyone who could put you in a vulnerable position.

Gemini Stop and think before you take a risk that could lead to an unstable emotional or professional situation. Overdoing it in any way will lead to loss.

Cancer Making home improvements or hosting a function will bring you great satisfaction and joy. The results of your hospitality will lead to advancement.

Leo Travel and communication are favored. Keeping busy will help you get ahead and avoid a spat with someone near and dear to you.

Virgo Don't make unrealistic promises or expect too much from others. Take care of details on your own in order to avoid disappointment.

Libra Waiting for someone else to take the lead will set you back. If you step up and make things happen, you'll be proud of your accomplishments.

Scorpio Pay homage to the people you love the most. Plan something unique that will bring everyone closer together and help set a new tradition in place.

Sagittarius Don't offer your time or cash to outsiders or you will be taken advantage of. Your personal responsibilities will keep you busy.

Capricorn In order to get something from others, you have to offer incentives. A personal business proposition can help you raise your income.

Aquarius Gossip or personal secrets will undermine your reputation. Don't express your thoughts openly or share confidences with colleagues.

Pisces Picking up new skills or experiences will boost your earning potential. Finishing what you start will be your ticket to success. EUGENIA LAST
